

Title: Understanding the context of British and European responses to life science technologies

Abstract: This presentation will examine the particular experiences of, and responses to new and emerging life science technologies in agriculture and medicine in Britain and Europe. These may differ in significant respects from those in China and other developing/emerging economies. It will seek to explore these differences and set the scene for subsequent papers – finally addressing the challenges for developing a common understanding of the research and policy issues at stake.